HE QUOTED ST. PAUL.

A Bishop's Blunder and the Clever Way It Was Corrected.

A certain bishop of one of the middle states is described as a man who possessed great learning, but had not the saving sense of humor. In "Reminiscences of Bishops and Archbishops" Bishop Potter gives an instance of the absence of this quality.

It happened on one occasion that an episcopal election had come up for review in the house of bishops, and questions as to the bishop elect were being asked and answered with considerable freedom. A bishop who knew the bishop elect in a very intimate way was on his feet and was being catechised, when a bishop called out, "What kind of wife has our brother elect?"

"His present wife"—began the bishop thus challenged, when the middle state delegate sprang to his feet.

"One moment!" he cried. "Do I understand my brother aright? Did he say 'his present wife,' and am I to understand that by that phrase he means to imply that the brother elect has had a previous wife? Because, if so, I cannot vote for his confirmation. St. Paul says, 'A bishop must be the husband of one wife.'"

For a moment the house, in which were a number of bishops who, having been bereaved of their earthly partners, had supplied their places, sat still in stunned silence, until a prelate, whose sense of humor was as keen as the last speaker's was feeble, rose in his place and said, "Do I understand that the bishop regards the language of the apostle which he has just quoted as mandatory?"

"Certainly!" exclaimed the man who had objected.

"Very well, then, Mr. Chairman," said the interrogating bishop blandly, "if the bishop regards the language of St. Paul, when he says that a bishop must be the husband of one wife, as mandatory, I should like to ask him what he proposes to do with the bishop of"—naming a bachelor bishop—"who hasn't any?"

There was a shout of laughter, amid which the bishop who had objected took his seat, flushed and angry. The humor of his blunder was wholly unperceived by him.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Every good farmer has three or four jobs laid up for a rainy day.

The man who is old enough to know better is usually old enough to die.

People talk about "different temperaments," when they really mean different tempers.

Some men are so mean they like to take their wives' advice so they can tell them later how worthless it was.

There is this important difference between a friend and kin: Every time you see the friend you don't have to explain something.

How "set" old people are in their ways! If an elderly person should be asked to change his seat at the table, how it would rattle him!

People are not devoted to your interests. You must have noticed it. Therefore you should give your interests a lot of intelligent attention. For if you don't do it no one will.—Atchison Globe.

Explicit Instructions.

Two New York girls recently were ordered by their mother to join her in a mining camp about a day's journey from the City of Mexico. The girls were to travel to Vera Cruz by steamer and then by rail to the capital, where their father was to meet them. As they never had been in that country before they wrote to their mother asking what sort of clothes they should bring with them. By return mail they received a breathless sort of an epistle telling them to be sure and start from New York by a certain date, but as to the clothes question, the only reply was, "Be sure and have your riding habits of the sort of brown that will harmonize with the atmosphere here."—New York Press.

The Meanest Man.

"About the meanest man I ever knew," said an old time Clevelander, "was a man out at the edge of town that I used to pick cherries for when I was a kid. He objected to the boys eating any of the cherries, and he used to crawl around under the trees after we got through and gather up all the seeds he could find that we had dropped while up in the trees. Then he would charge us up with that many cherries."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Adaptable.

A city man went into a village store and asked for a pair of socks, size ten. The clerk said he was sorry, but they kept only one size and that was twelve.

"What!" said the man. "You surely don't mean to say that every one in this village wears the same size sock?"

"Oh, no, sir. But if they happen to be too long they pulls them up at the heels, and if they are too short they pulls them down at the toes."—Lippincott's.

The Gentle Hint.

Widow—Do you know that my daughter has set eyes upon you? Gentleman (flattered)—Has she, really? Widow—Certainly. Only today she was saying, "That's the sort of gentleman I should like for my pa."—London Tatler.

A Pictorial Deluge.

"Moving?" inquired a neighbor, as a furniture van stopped in front of Kerlect's house. "No, indeed," replied Kerlect. "A friend wants to borrow our collection of souvenir postcards"—Leslie's Weekly.

In Shallow Waters.

By KIRK McGEE.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

When it became known throughout the town and the fishing fleet that after one more trip to the Banks Dave Bliss, who had for three years been mate of the Swordfish under the captaincy of Josh Baker, would take out the Mary and Jane and become a captain himself, there was not a begrudging word or a selfish thought.

Dave was a young man and a popular one. He was a good sailor and a lucky fisherman. It was known that he was in love and was already engaged to Captain Baker's daughter Mary, and the talk was that they were to be married the day he assumed his new command. If it had been for Captain Baker to choose a son-in-law from the fifty single men in the fishing fleet, he would have held out his hand to Dave in preference. They had fought the perils of the sea together for three years, and they had come to know each other as landsmen can never know one another.

Out on the Banks that day it was squally weather. The air was cold and raw, and the sea heaved up and gurgled and growled as if demanding victims. Every craft needed watching, and none was more closely watched than the Swordfish. There came a moment, however, when the captain was below for a drink of something hot, and the mate had his eyes on a tramp steamer shearing her way through the fleet, and that very moment it was when a squall struck down with the swiftness of a cannon ball, and the Swordfish was thrown on her beam ends.

It was inevitable that confusion should follow. With her masts flat on the water and her sails bellying out, the boat could not right to an even keel, and it was the mate himself who seized an ax from its becket and cut away the shrouds, letting the strain take them overboard. It was the only thing to do to save the schooner, and he periled his life in the doing of it. That went for naught, however. No man is so jealous of his reputation as a fisherman. He knows, and his owners know, that there must be accidents at sea, no matter what the vigilance, but for all that an accident is a smirch and an injury to his reputation.

So it was that the news ran through the fleet of sixty sail almost as if by telegraph, that the Swordfish had been dismasted in a squall which had spared all others. There must have been carelessness, of course. Captain Baker blamed Dave Bliss, and Dave Bliss resented the criticism, so the first of the fleet to reach home had a story to tell that quickly spread all over the town. The fisher craft that goes down at sea is talked of for a week. The fisher craft that loses a mast or a set of sails is not forgotten for six months.

When the Swordfish came limping home a week or so behind all others, there was a gulf between master and mate. The crew were divided in sentiment. It was the same with the townspeople. When it was known that the craft had arrived, Mary Baker sat at the window and waited for her father and lover. They had always come to the house in company upon their return. The hours went by, and at last the father arrived alone. His face was stern set, and hope went out of her heart as she saw it. She had heard the gossip of the early arrivals, but hoped that it was exaggerated. She knew that the fleet and the town had taken sides, but she believed in her lover.

"He'll never enter my door again!" said the father as he stood and looked at the girl.

"But it couldn't have been his fault, and we are to be—to be married," she protested.

"He should have seen the squall. He shouldn't have lost his head afterward and cut away the masts. He comes here no more. He shall never be son-in-law of mine. I want to hear nothing more about it."

That evening Mary received a note from Dave by the hands of a boy. He said not a word against her father. He simply asserted that he had done the best he could and that before seeing her again he would wait for public opinion to change. He had not lost the confidence of the owners of the Mary and Jane. She would be ready for sea in ten days. He hoped that his Mary would believe in him and that things would come right in the end.

The reply he received strengthened and encouraged him, and he went about his affairs as if the gossip of the town were naught to him. The Mary and Jane sailed with the fleet. Aye, more than that, she headed it. It had been predicted that she would prove a flier, but when her canvas had been stretched and her rigging tightened up she smoked along like steam. It was her misfortune to pass the Swordfish close aboard. During the two weeks on shore Captain Baker and his old mate had met three or four times a day, but as total strangers. They could have looked into each other's eyes now, but they did not. There was no anger in the new captain's heart, but the other flushed and compressed his lips, and those who were watching him realized that he felt as if an insult had been put upon him.

That first voyage of the new craft is still recalled at the fish houses, in the sail lofts and offices and wherever fishermen gather to gossip. She shortened the run to the banks by two days. She was stowing away cod when the arrived. Her daily catch largest for years. She had up and was ready for home and a market, while half the fleet were still whistling for fish.

Then came another such day as that on which the accident had happened. There was the same leaden sky out of which squalls burst at intervals and without warning—the same ugly, heaving sea, swelling up as if to pour its weight on deck and sink the craft out of hand.

The fleet was heaving and drifting now, and fifty pairs of eyes saw the masts of the Swordfish go overboard before the downfly of a squall. There was no Dave Bliss on board this time, but the thing had happened just the same. On the previous occasion there were deep water and plenty of sea room. On this the fleet had been drifting down into the shallows and was just on the point of tacking.

What every man at once realized was that the crippled Swordfish must go to leeward before the send of the sea until she grounded on the sands a mile away. Then the waves would finish her in ten minutes. The Mary and Jane had her home pennant flying and was already on her course. She was loaded deep with her catch and drawing twice as much water as the other.

There was just one way to save the Swordfish. Men of the fleet will tell you today that there was only one man among them who dared take the chance. That man was Captain Dave Bliss. There was only a moment of hesitation. Then he roused out a hawser, had a casting line bent on, and, setting more sail than he would have dared to under any other circumstances and running a risk that made his crew turn pale and shiver, he headed his craft down toward the other. He knew the depth of water to an inch. He had but to look over the side to see the sand boiling up. The helpless, despairing men on the Swordfish were watching, and when his plan became clear Captain Baker turned to his mate and said:

"He's the bravest man in the fleet, but he's also a fool! Both craft will go down together!"

The Mary and Jane was stirring up the sand as she came flying down, for a craft of her keel within eighteen inches of the bottom will almost cut a groove in the sand or mud. On the bow of this one stood Captain Dave Bliss ready to heave the casting line, and Captain Baker went forward to receive it. It was thrown at the right second, and men hauled away at line and hawser in frenzied haste. The Mary and Jane must come up into the wind's eye and hold there a moment until the hawser could be secured.

Good sailors have said that there were forty-nine chances out of fifty that her masts would go during that crucial moment, but the odd chance won. The hawser was made fast, the rescuing craft fell off, and a moment later she was towing the wreck into deeper water and safety. It was the top notch of seamanship and level headedness.

They heard about the rescue in the town when the Mary and Jane reached port. Tears came to the waiting Mary Baker's eyes and thankfulness to her heart, but Captain Dave did not appear. The story was told again and again as other craft came in, but her lover did not make his appearance at the cottage on the hill. It was only when the Swordfish came limping into port that Dave took his old captain's arm, and they both walked through the streets until they came upon Mary waiting at the gate. Then the stern old father joined their hands together and whispered:

"Take her, Dave, and give me a corner of the fireplace for the few years I've got to live. I'm done with the fleet."

If You Read This

It will be to learn that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or billousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung disease (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Haro, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming drugs and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful agent in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

ODD WAYS OF THE POETS

There is a sort of idea in the public mind that the poet is what scientists call a "fixed genius," that every poet is the exact counterpart of every other poet. There is probably no class of men in the world—if class it can be called—whose members differ more widely in personality.

Pope, for instance, was a miser. Dryden, Sedley, Rochester and Shelley seemed to have no use for money and "splashed it about in the most insane fashion. Shakespeare was a keen man of business. His contemporaries, Marlowe and Massinger, did not leave enough to have their bodies decently buried.

Coming down to modern times, Tennyson was artistically the most delicate and fastidious of men. A misplaced comma, an epithet which was not the perfection of expression, gave him nights of insomnia.

Yet he was perhaps the most utterly careless man of his generation regarding his personal appearance. Had he not been carefully watched by his devoted wife, he would have been quite content to wear a suit of clothes until it dropped off him bit by bit in obedience to the law of gravitation.

A great admirer of Tennyson once described his first meeting with the great poet.

It occurred at a roadside public house in the Isle of Wight. The late laureate was seated by the kitchen fire, with a short black clay pipe between his lips, burning grease spots out of a pair of check trousers with the point of a redhot poker.

It was probably Tennyson's "faculty of silence" which helped him to secure the friendship of the greatest talker—in both senses of the phrase—of his generation, Thomas Carlyle.

Carlyle had occasional fits of silence, and he and Tennyson would sit on opposite sides of the hearth for six hours at a stretch without exchanging as many words.

At the expiration of such a period of silent intercommunication Carlyle would knock the ashes out of his last pipe and remark with every symptom of the keenest intellectual satisfaction, "Aye, Alfred, mon, we've had a glorious nicht!"

Tennyson's great and friendly rival, Browning, was as different from him in his personal peculiarities as he was in point of genius.

He always looked as if he had just been turned out of a bandbox. Tennyson was one of the most silent of men, Browning one of the most ebullient and loquacious. Tennyson was pessimistic and somewhat morose. Browning was always bursting with optimism and expansiveness.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

MAORI SAVAGERY.

The Women Slaughtered the Victims For the Cannibal Feasts.

Mrs. E. M. Dunlop of Auckland, New Zealand, writes of the Maori women: "The Maori woman can keep at will. She has practiced the art, which has formed an important part of her training. She weeps so genuinely and so copiously as to melt the heart of a sympathizing witness. The Maoris hold 'tnagis,' or weeping parties, to mourn their dead, and in these gatherings the women play a conspicuous part. While weeping they utter a low, mournful cry, which has a very weird effect when produced by a number of voices. The mourners sit in groups, with their heads partially covered, giving forth their monotonous wailing and shedding copious tears.

"The Maori woman of past ages almost excelled her lord in savagery. On the return of a triumphant war party they usually brought home a number of prisoners and slaves. It was the privilege of the women of the tribe to fall upon these, slaughtering them in preparation for the cannibal feast which followed. The women bore the painful ceremony of the tattoo without shrinking. Spiral marks were cut into the flesh of their chins, lips and faces; a soot made by a peculiar method was rubbed into the wounds, causing an indelible blue-black stain.

"The Maoris, even in their former state, treated their women with a certain amount of consideration, although the lot of the female slave was very hard and often ended in her being served up as a dainty dish to appease the appetite of her voracious lord, who would kick away the baskets of vegetable food presented to him by his wives as a signal that he required the tender flesh of a slave girl."

His Logic.

A keen business man bought at a low price a theater that had long been unprofitable and by economical management put it immediately on a paying basis. But he was very economical. He watched the expenses with the sharpest eye. The first month's expense account contained the item: "Meat for cats, to protect the scenery and properties from the rats' ravages, $2." The proprietor struck this item out, writing on the margin: "If the cats eat the rats, wherefore the meat? If they don't, wherefore the cats?"

No Samples.

"Well," demanded the stern visaged woman at the back door, "what do you want?"

"Why," replied the tramp, "I seen you advertised 'table board' in dis mornin's paper."

"Well?"

"Well, I fought mebbe yer wuz givin' out some samples."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Saving Should be Taught in Schools.

NO BETTER part of a child's education could be than that of saving, thrift and economy. Schooling along these lines is usually left to home training or natural inclination or the lesson of experience. If not sufficiently strong much hard battling comes in after life. Financing one's way through life is no easy matter and the thoughtless expenditure of childhood pennies is accountable for much of the spendthrift habits of after life. What a splendid plan is the school savings bank system. It is a successful experiment in the schools of twenty-two States in this country, where children, upon saving three dollars, are given a bank book and begin to understand all the principles of the savings bank system together with the good that accrues from it

Parents are generously anxious to educate their children in order that they may hold their own socially and commercially and the earning capacity of the individual seems to them the solution of the bread and butter problem which confronts their progeny. In spite of daily demonstration to the contrary, this fallacy persists while it all might be averted if children were taught the discipline and importance of saving.

There would be a great deal more intelligent distribution of wealth if this principle were early instilled, and with education it is most essential, for none feel the rub of financial pressure more keenly or chafe under the yoke of debt than the educated. With past indifference during school days to matters of dollars and cents there has been a growing recklessness or indifference to the saving of money and by the time the collegiate years are reached spendthrifts have developed and positions and salaries, however big, that come afterwards do little good and embarrassment follows.

It may seem too sordid and far from ideal to bring the study of filthy lucre into the realm of education, but in this practical age it is a necessity and the school savings bank system should be encouraged and fostered wherever the young generation goes to school.

"A MAN who don't advertise his business is just like a fellow winking at his girl in the dark—he knows what he is doing but nobody else does." This is a very terse statement of facts and the truth in a nutshell. It was at one time considered rather sensational to advertise but those who tried to be exclusive found themselves excluded from their share of the trade and so it was demonstrated that advertising is a very great necessity to the successful business man and those who want to reach out for business. The best evidence of all in favor of advertising is that seen in the reports of bankers, all of whom declare that they find advertising a necessary adjunct to the prosperity of their financial institutions. It would not seem on the surface that banks would have to advertise, but it is just as necessary to educate the public up to the utilities of a savings bank account as to remind the people that emulsion is a good thing to guard them from future cold or the coughs of winter. Suggestion is a very strong factor in impelling the public to act and this is the way advertising acts on readers. Druggists can testify how much advertised patent medicines are called for. The virtues of printer's ink is well known by all big firms. The only trick is in knowing how to advertise, but advertise in the newspapers you must.

THERE is some apprehension expressed lest the small merchants and tradespeople of San Francisco will cast their votes for the Labor Union candidates in the hope that wages will continue to be high and the workingmen will have plenty of ready money to spend. It does not seem possible that this will be the case, for the far-sighted Jewish merchants, of whom San Francisco has many, must realize that if capital shuts down building operations will cease and there will be no work and consequently little money for working people to spend. Affairs in San Francisco have reached a grave crisis and now hang in the balance. It is to be hoped that things will be adjusted. The three-cornered fight, while to be deplored, was inevitable, since labor must have its candidate for Mayor and capital, as represented by Rudolph Spreckels and the United Railroads, two more.

IF ENVIRONMENT reacts on the characteristics of its inhabitants and influences disposition and physical quality as well, it is right to infer that the climate and beauty and health of a locality will influence the matrimonial condition of couples. From this deduction and from the fact that so many golden weddings are celebrated in Sonoma county it is natural to infer that "Imperial Sonoma" is a guarantee for long and happy married bliss.

THAT Senator Geo. C. Perkins will succeed himself as United States Senator when the Legislature convenes in January, 1909, hardly admits of a doubt at this time. Hon. Geo. A. Knight, who has been frequently mentioned for the Senatorial honor, says nay, and is a strong supporter of Mr. Perkins, who has so long represented his State with dignity, grace and ability in the United States Senate.

A Most Worthy Article.

When an article has been on the market for years and gains friends every year, it is safe to call this medicine a worthy one. Such is Ballard's Hoarhound Syrup. It positively cures coughs and all pulmonary diseases. One of the best known merchants in Mobile, Ala., says "For five years my family has not been troubled with winter coughs. JOHN BULETTI, Prop.

NOW IS BEST TIME TO TAKE,

Directions to Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

A well-known authority on rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription, which any one can easily prepare at home:

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

FIRE WARDEN THOS. JOHNSON'S PURSE.

This Pro Bono Publico Business Not to His Liking.

Fire Warden Thomas Johnson of Glen Ellen, has written to the State Forester at Sacramento, says the Union, that paying his own expenses when ferreting out violators of the forest laws is little more than his purse can stand, and he wants to know what the State is going to do about it. This again raises a question which has been asked several times but remains unanswered. The State Forester says that under the old statutes the State was supposed to receive all fines collected for such violations, less the cost for collections. Under the new law the fine is equally distributed to the State and the county in which the fine is imposed.

The State Forester, however, is of the opinion that under the old statute our local Fire Warden might collect his expenses from Sonoma county under "the cost of collection" clause. However, the law has never been tested. Fire Wardens frequently complain on this score, but never press their claims.

Not long since Fire Warden Johnson caused the arrest of Frank Brogard of Glen Ellen, who allowed a brush fire to get beyond his control and which did considerable damage to property up that way. Brogard was fined $25 by Justice of the Peace Wagner, and it seems but fair that the Fire Warden's expenses should have been paid out of the fine, but this was not done and the warden had to dig up his own expenses. This was a case of too much Brogard and not enough of Johnson, and who can blame our local Fire Warden for not having a liking for this pro bono publico business.

Sonoma's Building Boom.

More buildings have been erected in this city the past two and three years than were built here in the twenty-five years previous to the improvement spirit which took possession of our town in 1904. Since that time many handsome homes and not a few substantial business buildings have been erected in various parts of town. Several new buildings are in course of construction now, among these are Duhring's brick store, Van Amringe's dental parlors, Bianchini's stone winery and numerous dwellings, among the latter being a five-room modern cottage for Gus Seipp, ground for which was broken Monday by Jos. B. Small, the contractor and builder.

Quail Shooting Season Opens.

The quail shooting season opened Tuesday and more hunters were to be seen in the hills than birds. However, a few local shooters secured fair bags, but we have yet to hear of one who bagged the limit. Theo. Kiser and Jim Modini sneaked up to the Gericke ranch before daylight in the morning, calculating to catch the birds asleep. The bag they brought to town is in question. They were both interviewed separately by our reporter. One claimed the shooting was no good and that five birds between them were secured. The other told the scribe they got twenty birds and that the shooting was fine and—there you are.

The Woman's Club Abroad.

The October number of the Western Woman, a monthly of San Francisco edited by Laura Bride Powers, has this to say of the Sonoma Valley Woman's Club:

"The Sonoma Valley Woman's Club has done a lot of worth-while things in the six or seven years of its existence, among them making the historic Plaza a habitable, hospitable spot.

"A postcard from Mrs. Robert Potter Hill—and thus do picture postcards some times justify the crime—show a Good Thing Done

"The Sonoma Plaza, as all who know their California history—and those that don't are quite some few—was the scene of many of the melodramatic episodes that marked the transition period from Mexican to American domination.

"Among these was the Bear Flag incident, a small affair in itself, and leaving but little impaess upon the tremendous events that followed. But it was highly dramatic, and a plucky stand for independence, though foolhardy in the light of other days. However, it is an historical picture, and a convicing one. Therefore it should live. And properly to commemorate it, the club has marked the spot with a memorial, telling the tale to the generations that are to follow.

"That's patriotism expressed—the only kind that counts.

"There's a lot more of the same kind of work for women to do all over California.

"Why not begin now?"

"The Franklin," Santa Rosa.

Mrs. H. A. Bayler, widow of the late John Bayler, who lost his life in the earthquake in Santa Rosa, and who was well-known in this valley, has opened "The Franklin." on Fourth street, over Luttrell's drug store, in that city. It will be conducted as a first-class lodging house where rooms can be had by the day, week or month. We take pleasure in recommending the Franklin to the people of this valley who have occasion to remain over night at the county seat. See ad in another column.

Sporting Notes.

Harry Sophey of San Francisco has bought a promising three-year-old colt from John Ford of Santa Rosa. The filly is by Meridian. Joe Ryan of the Union Stables will handle her this winter for the new owner. The prospects are good for another race horse next season.

Joe Ryan and August Marcy attended the sale of standard bred horses in San Francisco last Monday. Mr. Ryan purchased two promising colts. Both were bred and raised on the Santa Rosa stock farm. One was bred by St. Whips and the other is by the famous sire Washington McKinney.

Sonoma's Public Library.

The Free Public Library of this city has received from Sacramento this week Traveling Library No. 30, comprising fifty volumes of fiction, science, religion, biography, etc. Among these volumes which are now upon the shelves of the library, we might mention "A Tramp Abroad," Mark Twain; "In the Midst of Life." Ambrose Bierce; "Remember the Alamo," Amelia Edith Barr; "John March, Southerner," George Washington Cable; "The Beautiful Lady," Booth Tarkington;" and other volumes from the pens of many other well-known authors of fiction. Among the religious works is "The Eternal Life," Hugo Munsterberg, a subtle philosophical view of the possibility and meaning of an eternal life outside mere personal immortality.

These books are accessible to the general reading public.

ACCOMPLISHED THIEVES.

The Bhattees Aim to Attain Perfection in the Art of Stealing.

The Bhattees are an Indian tribe that devote their whole attention to attaining perfection in the art of stealing. From their earliest years their youth are trained to endure the greatest fatigue with comparative ease.

Among other accomplishments which the young Bhattee must acquire by constant practice, the following are indispensable:

He must learn to bleat like a sheep, bark like a dog, crow like a cock, bray like an ass and imitate the movements of all kinds of animals. He must be able to crawl along the ground, run like a goat or a dog or stand on his head with his hind legs extended wide so as to appear in the dusk like the stump of a tree.

In connection with this last mentioned acquirement a story is told of a cavalry sentinel who while standing on duty on one occasion heard something move about the head ropes of his horse. On looking round he saw what he supposed to be a large dog, which ran between his legs and nearly upset him. He suspected, however, that some roguery was on foot, and the better to detect it, he placed himself behind what appeared to be the stump of a tree, at no great distance from the spot on which he had been previously standing.

He then hung his helmet on the supposed stump, and, bent on the most attentive scrutiny, he placed his head between the two limbs of the tree, so as, unperceived, to command a direct view of the quarter from which the noise had at first proceeded.

This, however, was too much for the thief (for such in reality was this would be tree stump), who, unable any longer to restrain his laughter, and finding his situation somewhat critical, suddenly performed a somersault, upset the astonished soldier, made off with his helmet and was seen no more.—London Telegraph.

A TIP FOR THE CLERK.

Abrupt End of Church Service—The Devil In the Gown.

Among the amusing instances of the humor of the parish clerk that are told is a story of a clerk who went to sleep as the preacher went into the pulpit. That day the parson had prepared a particularly impressive sermon, dividing it, according to custom, into many parts. When the "firstly" was concluded the parson paused for breath, and the clerk, awaking and believing that the discourse had come to an end, pronounced the usual "Amen" in a very loud voice.

The congregation arose, and the service ended abruptly. As the squire passed out he slipped a coin into the old clerk's hand, whispering: "You managed that very well, Thomas, I'll give you the same next time."

A vicar who held Caistor, with its two chapelries of Holton and Clixby, and the living of Rothwell and was nonresident had a curate who was a great smoker and was in the habit of retiring to the vestry to put on the black gown and smoke a pipe before sermon time while the congregation sang a psalm. On one occasion he had an extra pipe, and the clerk hurried in to tell him that the people were getting impatient.

"Let them sing another psalm," said the curate. "They have, sir," replied the clerk. "Then let them sing the One Hundred and Nineteenth," was the laconic reply. Having finished his pipe, he began to put on his gown, but the folds were troublesome. "I think the devil's in the gown," he muttered. "I think he be," replied the clerk dryly.—London Strand.

Saved by His Wit.

A noncommissioned officer entering a barrack gate in Dublin was mistaken by the "fresh one" on sentry go, who immediately saluted him. The noncommissioned officer, unaware that his colonel was just behind, returned the salute, a thing not permissible under the circumstances. Arrived at his quarters, he was surprised to find an order for him to attend before the colonel. On presenting himself he was asked how he came to return the salute, knowing full well he was not entitled to it.

Not in the least embarrassed, he promptly answered, "Sir, I always return everything I am not entitled to."

A Bit of Kindness.

"The greatest thing," says some one, "a man can do for his Heavenly Father is to be kind to some of his other children." I wonder how it is that we are not all kinder than we are. How much the world needs it! How easily it is done! How instantaneously it acts! How infallibly it is remembered! How superabundantly it pays itself back—for there is no debtor in the world so honorable, so superbly honorable, as love.—Henry Drummond.

Not Unspeakable.

"But to my mind," said the clerical tourist from the east, "a plurality of wives is unspeakable." "Huh," snorted the good natured Mormon. "I never even heard of one wife that was unspeakable."—Philadelphia Press.

A Frank Admission.

"Yes; he saved my life."

"And you had gone down for the third time?"

"Oh, for the tenth. I had been trying to attract his attention for an hour."—Pittsburg Post.

There is no better ballast for keeping the mind steady on its keel than business.—Lowell.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for 10 Years Without Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have also been subject to croup, and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by L. S. Simmons.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall, of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by L. S. Simmons.

Daily Examiner and Index-Tribune $9 a year for both papers.

Quinsey, Sprains and Swellings Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quinsy. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is especially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by L. S. Simmons.

The Chase Home Place.

The Chase home place has been sold to Mr. W. B. Austin of Stockton, California, and he has commenced the subdivision of this beautiful tract into resident lots. It is Mr. Austin's intention to make this subdivision the and he will make every effort to interest parties wishing to build homes. Avenues will be graded through the tract, cement sidewalks will be laid on both sides of the principal avenue, ornimental trees will be planted, and substantial bridges will be constructed over the creek running through the tract.

The Chase home place has been noted for its beautiful trees, which are one of the desirable features in the selection of a resident lot. There will be no farmyards or chicken ranches in this subdivision. Every effort will be made to have the improvements desirable.

Mr. Austin has decided to give five lots free of cost for the purpose of constructing desirable residences, and he will make all reasonable inducements as to prices and terms to any party wishing to build a home in this tract.

That this is a rare opportunity to secure a home site there can be no question, and any one contemplating building will do well to investigate Mr. Austin's offer at once, as it is reasonably certain that this offer will not last long.

Prices of lots in this tract range from $200.00 to $350.00 according to location. Terms can be arranged to suit the purchaser, and the property can be purchased from any real estate agent in Sonoma, or through Mr. Austin's authorized agent, George E. Crane, care of B. F. Campbell, Sonoma, California.
